

Military Law

Military law is a set of statutes that apply to those serving in the armed forces of the United States. These laws also apply to civilians who work for the military. People subject to these statutes also have to follow the civil laws. Military laws concern such acts as disobeying or showing disrespect to superior officers, physically striking superior officers, desertion, and mutiny. People accused of serious offenses may end up at court-martial. This is a court, made up of officers, that tries those accused of breaking military laws.

Example: The military have their own police force. They are in-charge of enforcing the laws that specifically apply to military members and employees of the forces.
